The FTSE 3-month US T-bill is a short-term debt obligation backed the U.S. government. T-bills are sold in denominations of $1,000 up to a maximum of $5 million. They are issued through a competitive bidding process at a discount from par, which means that rather than paying a fixed interest payment like conventional bonds, the appreciation of the T-bill provides the return to the holder. All investments involve risk, including the possible loss of principal, and there is no guarantee that investment objectives will be met. Bonds are subject to market, interest rate and credit risk; and are subject to availability and market conditions.
